HAPPY

BIRTHDAY

1. Maintain healthy nutrition

Kids may often think healthy food is not tasty, and that it is bland. But as a parent, you can change that understanding by experimenting with healthy ingredients and recipes. Ensure that you give them a wholesome diet and keep them away from excessive consumption of junk food. Include plenty of fruits and vegetables in their diet.

2. Make them exercise

Sitting has become the villain in our lives. Prevent your child from leading a sedentary lifestyle and motivate him or her to exercise regularly. Outdoor activities should be encouraged whenever the weather permits. Indoor, make sure they are busy with aerobic activities like skipping, hopping and duck walking that provide adequate energy expenditure, instead of spending screen time. Indoor exercise for kids in monsoon. Encourage your child to do Indoor exercises in monsoon.

3. Maintain a healthy lifestyle

A healthy lifestyle is a sum total of the right eating, exercising and sleeping habits. Decrease their screen time and avoid providing them gadgets at least an hour before bedtime. This will help them sleep better and wake up fresh.

4. Maintain hygiene

Maintaining hand hygiene is very important to avoid contracting and spreading infection. Make sure children are washing their hands regularly and bathing every day to prevent monsoon-related illnesses.

5. Reduce stress

Schools have begun after a summer break, and students can feel stressed about the new session. Try to minimize stress for them and ease their transition without putting too much academic or extra-curricular pressure on them.

6. Vaccinations

Prevention is better than cure. So ensure that your child is up to date with all required vaccines as of age, as well as the yearly influenza vaccine. Typhoid and Hepatitis vaccine prevents typhoid and hepatitis A (jaundice) caused by infected food and water.
